Sheila Wrenn and Col. Curtis L. Wrenn Jr., USAKA/KMR commander, discuss their new assignment on Kwajalein.

Wrenns at home on Kwajalein

By Peter Rejcek
Associate Editor

Col. Curtis L. Wrenn Jr. feels most at home on the front line, having spent much of his career with six different battalions. In his own words, he's first and foremost a soldier — who spent his childhood doing the “bag drag” with his military father.

So what the heck is he doing on Kwajalein? That's a question the new USAKA/KMR commander asked of Lt. Gen. John Costello, SMDC commanding general, when he learned of his next assignment after a two-year stint as Professor Joint Operations at the Air War College at Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala.

Recalled Wrenn, “I said, ‘Sir, you’ve got the wrong guy for the job. What you really need is a rocket scientist and an acquisitions expert, of which I am neither.’ And he said, ‘Nah, the Army did the right thing, selecting the right guy for the job. What we want is caring leadership.’”

ing leadership,” Wrenn added. “That’s the part of this job that I feel most comfortable with.”

For Sheila Wrenn, the Colonel’s wife and college sweetheart, the move to this remote island is just one more uprooting on the road of being an Army wife.

“For any Army wife, her job is to make the home stable, because it’s unstable given the nature of [the Army],” she explained. “You want your children to feel like they do belong somewhere, even though they’re uprooted every two or three years. Consequently, you have to teach your children to be independent.”

Ironically, Sheila Wrenn’s own Army experiences have perhaps better prepared her for this assignment than her husband’s 21 years in the military, much of it spent “running around the woods.” As Wrenn noted, “This will be a stretch for me. If I had gone to a tactical position, I would have been well in my comfort zone ... but coming here I have to rely on the

WWII-era runway, 100-pound bomb recently unearthed

By Peter Rejcek

A 100-pound bomb. A World War II-era taxiway. For archaeologist Dr. Boris Deunert, a three-week stint on Kwajalein and Roi-Namur yielded some exciting discoveries less than one day into digging.

Deunert said he knew it was only a matter of time before a ditch-digging project at the Bunker Storage Area near the golf course unearthed something big, after small exploded and unexploded cartridges were found just below the surface. Ironically, the first discovery was a 100-pound bomb lying directly in the path of a proposed electrical line last Friday — the same day digging began.

“We thought this area would be disturbed. It’s very close to the ocean, so we thought it would have been washed over several times,” explained Deunert, former staff archaeologist at USAKA/KMR. But the discovery of the cartridges and three bomb craters pointed to the fact that the area had not been disturbed for years.

“If there was a bomb that hadn’t been detonated, the probability was pretty high [we would find one],” he said.

The runway was immediately closed while EOD personnel took

Toto, I don't think we're at Club Med anymore

I love calling my mother in the states during the winter months. Having moved to Albany, N.Y., from Oklahoma last November, she and my stepfather, especially, still have a hard time with 16 inches of snow in March.

I tell her we have 16 inches of stuff on the ground, but it's more like sand than snow.

She doesn't laugh nearly as much as I do.

Yeah, we have a lot to be thankful for out here, but we know that — the sunsets, pace of life and lack of traffic. One can recite the whole litany of benefits after less than a week here.

Some off-islanders even call this place Club Med or an American suburbia located on a tropical island. I don't buy it and neither do our senior leaders, apparently.

"You have performed magnificently," said Lt. Gen. John Costello, SMDC commanding general during the recent change of command. "Regardless of your vocation, your professionalism is magnified by your remoteness. You are truly living in a paradise, but paradise has its ups and downs and I know that."

Did the general hear me complaining the other day?

There are, no doubt, some downers, living out here.

Those close to their families know it well. At best, we can be back in the states in around 16 to 24 hours — if all the flights line up right. More likely, it will take at least two days, too much time if it's a family emergency.

There's certainly the "fishbowl" syndrome of living so closely with so few people. One can always get a crowd going at a party by asking, "What restaurant do you miss the most?" or "Have you seen the new show on TV?" The additional question for the ladies is the shopping question. You always get a fun reaction there.

Mrs. Costello told me, "[Kwaj] is a great place to live, with some significant challenges. If you were looking to get away from it all, find everything you need and shop till you drop, you're going to be disappointed. And you can have people who are unhappy wherever you live."

The general added that, "We're under pressure to do more with less."

And the pressure has never been greater.

"Our goal," said Secretary of Defense William Cohen, "is to provide protection to the American people against irresponsible nations, to prevent them from putting the United States in a position of being blackmailed and precluding us from taking action to defend our own national security interests."

The "states of concern" will be ready in 2005. Will we be ready?

The tracking Altair does keeps our leaders, up to the president, informed on what our foreign friends are putting in space.

In short, all our work leaves this little island and goes to some big places, and we're all contributing in some way to that product.

So when I tell my folks on the phone I'm out here defending the country, they laugh. I do, too, because on those off hours sitting on the beach it seems hard to believe. But there is a nugget of truth there we often forget.

Now, I'm not an unhappy person, nor am I the type to shrink under a little pressure. I'm thrilled to be here. We have a great lifestyle while we accomplish an important mission. I can put up with some inconvenience for that purpose. I just wonder if all those off-islanders who say how perfect our lives are truly understand the situation.

Kom ruwainene

"Kom ruwainene" is the Marshallese way to say, "Welcome."

Col. Curtis L. Wrenn Jr. and his wife, Sheila arrived recently from Air War College, Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala. Their daughter, Carrmen, is a graduate student in San Francisco.

Col. Wrenn is USAKA/KMR commander.

He says, "I will enjoy it here."

Major Rich Muschek, his wife Marie, and children, Chris, 8, and Mia, 6, arrived from Fort Rucker, Ala. He is test director at KMR.

They say, "Everyone seems very nice and made us feel welcome upon our arrival."

Mark and Kristy Schlueter and children, Travis, 6, and Briona, 1, arrived recently from San Diego, Calif.

Mark is Tradex analog section leader. He is returning for his second tour at Kwaj. The first was from 1991-96. Mark also attended high school here.

They say, "Travis can't wait to make some new friends. And Mom and Dad can't wait to find a reliable baby sitter for Briona so they can take advantage of the boating opportunities."

Depression, alcoholism serious problems even in paradise

By KW Hillis
Feature Writer

Every day for over three months, the woman kept her lonely, silent vigil on the bleachers near the Kwajalein runway. She watched the planes land and take off — desperately wanting to get on one and go home.

"She was from a very small town, living down the street from her parents," said the Rev. Al McNally. "She was extremely homesick and depressed."

Depression because of the isolation and separation from family and friends can be a serious problem here, said McNally, substituting for the Rev. John Dorr. McNally ministered to the Kwajalein Protestant community for five years.

Psychologist Dr. Theo Riley agreed, "Depression can also manifest itself by the overuse of alcohol. Using alcohol to cope with depression complicates a problem since alcohol ... is a central nervous system depressant."

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services estimates that over 17 million people in the U.S. suffer from depression at any given time, while the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism estimates that 14 million Americans either abuse alcohol or are alcoholics.

The Kwajalein Hospital Health Awareness committee designated August as Mental Health and Alcohol Awareness Month to focus on the dual problems of depression and alcohol abuse, said Kathy Campbell, committee chairperson.

The first sign of depression is often a change in the person's usual behavior, according to the Health Education Consultants. Symptoms as innocuous as insomnia or as serious as suicide attempts can indicate depression.

Alcoholism is a disease, not a moral weakness, according to the Mayo Clinic. One major reason people with an alcohol problem do not get help, despite doctors' or family members' concerns, is "as you develop the dependence on alcohol, you also develop 'blindness' to the problem, the Mayo Clinic reported.

Riley said depression and alcohol abuse can affect people of all ages, genders, lifestyles and nationalities.

"The normal stress of growing up, along with the separation from family and friends on the mainland, can be particularly hard on children," Riley said. "Spouses who worked outside the home in the states and do not find meaningful ways to fill their time are also susceptible." Children and adults "may become depressed or begin to abuse alcohol."

McNally agreed, adding that it is important for newly arrived people to be introduced to others by their supervisors or co-workers. "If you see someone sitting alone in the café, go over and introduce yourself," he added.

Family, friends, co-workers or teachers who suspect someone is depressed should aid the person in getting help, said both McNally and Riley.

"The inability of a depressed person to take the steps to help themselves makes it imperative for someone close to them to help," McNally said. The island has many resources including the hospital, the Employee Assistance Program and the chaplains.

"The EAP is a confidential way to get help for a personal problem which affects your job performance," said Joan Krone, Human Resources benefits administrator. "Recognizing the problem and seeking help will not jeopardize your employment with Raytheon."

"Exercise and getting involved with others helps, too. In fact, I recommended to the husband of the woman on the bleachers to go swimming with her every afternoon and to get her involved with a group at the church," McNally said. "It took a while, but she started to make friends and, with help, got over the depression."

Alcohol Abuse Screening Test

1. Do you feel that you drink more than other people? Yes/No
2. Do your relatives or friends complain about your drinking? Yes/No
3. Do you feel guilty about your drinking? Yes/No
4. Are you unable to stop drinking when you want to? Yes/No
5. Has drinking ever created a problem with you and your family? Yes/No
6. Have you ever gotten into trouble at work or school because of your drinking? Yes/No
7. Have you neglected your obligations (social or work) for two or more days in a row because of drinking? Yes/No
8. Have you ever gone to anyone for help about your drinking? Yes/No
9. Have you ever been in a hospital because of drinking? Yes/No
10. Have you ever been arrested due to drunken behavior? Yes/No

Score: Each "Yes" equals 1 point. A score of 2 or less, no problem. Score of 3, borderline problem. Score of 4 or more indicates an alcohol problem.

judgment and expertise of everyone else."

During an interview last Saturday, the Wrenns sat down with the Hourglass to talk a little about themselves and their expectations for the next two years.

"I am really impressed with the people," Wrenn said. "I really enjoy the sense of community on the island."

Sheila Wrenn agreed, saying that she's been overwhelmed by the enthusiasm and civic pride she's encountered among both military and civilian personnel. She said she looks forward to getting involved with quality of life issues during her stay here.

"I like the fact that there are so many areas with new programs, new ideas to make this community even stronger," she added.

An air defense officer, Wrenn became the 20th commander at USAKA/KMR when he assumed command July 27. Wrenn's appointment to USAKA/KMR, many years under the command of an engineer, represents a philosophical shift by the Army. Col. Wrenn said Costello wanted an air defense officer here to see the missile defense programs to maturation. After all, he was once a range customer.

"I have a perspective of what the soldiers in the field will need as a viable system," he explained. "You're able to bring some of that to the table when you're looking at the complexity of the systems."

And while this assignment is far from the brigade command he felt destined for, Wrenn said he welcomes the spotlight that now shines brightly on Kwajalein as testing of the National Missile Defense system continues, despite recent setbacks.

"You become prepared during your entire military career to be on center stage. It doesn't bother me," he said. "I kind of enjoy being on the leading edge of where we're going with air defense, with missile technology and with the future that will result from these technologies."

Of course, as USAKA/KMR commander, there are many roles to assume. Former commander Col. Gary K. McMillen often likened the position to that of a mayor of a small town.

"It's a great analogy, and it's very true," Wrenn agreed. "Now, is it something the military trains you to do? Absolutely not. I will rely upon my staff and everyone in this community to help me grow into that role. I may be 'mayor,' but I didn't run for office."

The Commander in Chief Pacific Command representative to the Republic of the Marshall Islands is yet another role expected of the commander and his

a good relationship."

Wrenn said the key to fostering good relations with the RMI is about treating people with dignity and respect. It is a philosophy, he said, that applies not just between nations but also among individuals, military or civilian.

"To understand the Marshallese people and culture and not to force ourselves upon them [is important], but at the same time we are encumbered with a mission here," he said. "It is mission first and people always. We have to accomplish the mission, but you don't get there without a quality workforce and taking care of your people."

Before departing Kwajalein, McMillen said he was especially proud of the strides that had been made to narrow the gap between military and civilian personnel on Kwajalein. Sheila Wrenn noted that the military's esoteric methods can be misinterpreted as being hostile — but that's simply not the case.

"[The military has its] own hierarchy, their own military justice system. And it's different from the way things are done in the civilian sector," she explained. "I can see how someone can have that impression. That's not the case; the military is just entrenched in their own world. It's competitive and they do what it takes to succeed."

Said Wrenn, "My job is to serve everyone in the community — and we look forward to serving everyone in the community. It's not the other way around. My job is to convey the needs of this organization back to headquarters."

Burial sites may still contain remains, says archaeologist ...

care of. The procedure took about an hour, according to D.J. Moore, EOD tech.

Deunert, pointing to the empty hole where the old-style U.S. bomb was discovered, noted the top layer of soil was fairly thin, barely covering a second, blackened layer that testifies to the destruction wrought by the 1944 battle that took place here. Below that is a third, sandy layer that predates the war.

"If you sift through it, you'll probably find all kinds of ammunition — expended and unexpended," Deunert said. "It's definitely an area where some heavy fighting took place."

The following day, only 50 feet or so farther along the ditch, a World War II-era runway was unearthed, about a foot below the surface. Made out of Marsden matting, a type of pockmarked metal, the temporary taxiway was constructed because the original Japanese runway had been bombed into oblivion during the Kwajalein invasion, according to Deunert. He said the holes in the metal's surface would stick into the ground, providing a smooth and stable surface to support both light and heavy airplanes.

A 25- to 30-foot cross section of the buried structure, the width of the runway, was unearthed and then later destroyed to make way for the electrical line. Deunert said he is unsure how long the taxiway might be, but estimated it ran from the bunkers next to the shore to the present runway.

"WW II aerial photographs show it was fairly extensive," he said.

Deunert said there is the possibility of additional, much older discoveries near the fixed-wing hangar, where work is underway to help control flooding near lens well No. 8. A ditch is being dug so that the water can slowly seep into the ground, where it will filter out before being fed into the well.

"Unfortunately, the location of lens well No. 8 is in an area that we believe to be a prehistoric site," Deunert said. "Just about 100 feet north of the site where we're currently digging we found the oldest known Marshallese burial — 2,000 years old."

Dr. Marshall Weisler originally excavated the site several years ago. Deunert said the extent of the burial ground is unknown, so subsurface units — controlled archaeological excavations that measure a square meter, aligned north to south — will be dug at increments, as much as one meter deep.

"Everything we found, since we're just in the top level, is World War II related," he said. "In the lower layers, in the sand, we would find the Marshallese burials — if there are any."

One unexpected present-day find is a huge deposit of coal that Deunert said may have been used to fuel the Japanese ships, which used steam engines, or possibly a power plant.

The grave documented by Weisler had contained the remains of a Marshallese, likely female, as well as grave goods, including a necklace, according to Deunert. A couple of years ago a second set of remains had been found near the Cold Storage Warehouse, he added.

"On this site we found two burial plots, therefore we must assume that they are part of a larger burial ground. Since we did not know if there were other burial plots in this area, we created an archaeological site based on traditional Marshallese settlement patterns," Deunert explained. "Traditionally, the Marshallese were buried at sea. Only the high-ranking people, like the leroj, which is the female chief, and the iroij, which is the male chief, were buried on land."

Any additional finds in the next couple of weeks could be good news for the archaeologist, but bad news for construction projects. Deunert noted there is an expensive mitigation process involved whenever a grave is unearthed.

"Whenever we find human remains, that's a very sensitive issue."

Appointment of part-time U.S.
Magistrate Judge for the District of Hawaii at Kwajalein Missile Range,
July 2, 2000.

Note: Law degree not required

The Judicial Conference of the United States has authorized the appointment of a part-time magistrate judge for the United States District Court for the District of Hawaii at Kwajalein Missile Range, on July 2, 2000.

The duties of the position are demanding and wide-ranging, and include: 1) the conduct of most preliminary proceedings in criminal cases; 2) the trial and disposition of misdemeanor cases; 3) the conduct of various pretrial matters and evidentiary proceedings on delegation from the judges of the district court; and 4) the trial and disposition of civil cases upon consent of the litigants.

The basic jurisdiction of the United States magistrate judge is specified in 28 U.S.C. Section 636.

To be qualified for appointment, an applicant must: 1) be, and have been for at least five years, a member in good standing of the bar of the highest court of a state, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, or the Virgin Islands of the United States, and have been engaged in the active practice of law for a period of at least five years (with some substitutes authorized), or have a degree from a college or university of recognized standing, with a minimum of five years of progressively responsible administrative experience in public service or business; 2) be competent to perform all the duties of the office; be of good moral character; be emotionally stable and mature; be committed to equal justice under the law; be in good health; be patient and courteous; and be capable of deliberation and decisiveness; 3) be less than 70 years old; 4) not be related to a judge of the district courts; reside on Kwajalein.

A Merit Selection Panel that includes attorneys will review all applicants and recommend to the judges of the district court in confidence the five persons it considers best qualified. The court will make the appointment, following an FBI full-field investigation and an IRS tax check of the appointee. An affirmative will be made to give due consideration to all qualified candidates, including women and members of minority groups.

The current annual salary of the position is $3,275.

The term of office is four years.

More information on the magistrate judge position may be obtained from the clerk of the district court or the chairman of the selection panel.

Three (3) copies of a resumé must be submitted by interested persons and received by July 14, 2000. Resumés should be addressed to: Merit Selection Panel for United States Magistrate Judge - Kwajalein, United States District Court, 300 Ala Moana Blvd., Room C-338, Honolulu, HI, 96850.

All resumé will be kept confidential, unless the applicant consents to disclosure, and all applications will be examined only by members of the Merit Selection Panel and the judges of the district court. The panel's deliberations will remain confidential.

NOTE: Part-time magistrate judges are not normally tendered government-furnished chambers or office space. They are reimbursed for the actual and necessary expenses incurred in the performance of their duties (28 U.S.C. Section 635(b)).

Jeramon non kom

"Jeramon non kom" is the Marshallese way to say, "Goodbye and good luck friends."

Lynn Olson departs for Castle Rock, Wash., Saturday on AMC. She plans to finish her teaching certification.

Lynn is supervisor of adult athletics for Raytheon Community Activities.

In farewell, Lynn says, "I know there will be life after Kwaj — I just hope it is as good as this life."

Andrea and Denny Dekker depart
Saturday on ATI for Las Cruces,
N.M., after a three-year tour at Kwaj.

Denny is USAKA/KMR Community Services Division chief, and Andrea is secretary at the USAKA/
KMR Host Nation Office.

They are headed to White Sands Missile Range, where Denny will be Chief, Community Operations and Billeting.

They say, "More than anything, we will deeply miss the wonderful friends we have made in the past three years.
We will continue to read the Hourglass on the Internet."

Helen Claire Sievers leaves Kwaj
Aug. 5 on Aloha. LeRoy and son
Charlie will follow Aug. 18.

The Sievers have been at Kwaj a total of 18 years over four tours, with this tour totaling seven years.

LeRoy is KMCC system engineer for MIT/Lincoln Lab. During this tour, Helen Claire has been principal of Queen of Peace High School on Gugeegue for three years, Ebeye Hospital administrator for 2½ years, and was on the board of the Marshallese Cultural Center.

They are heading to the Boston area, where LeRoy will return to work at Lincoln Lab.

Helen Claire says in farewell, "We had an unexpectedly terrific experience out here, in part because of the cross-cultural experience. I'm really grateful to my Marshallese friends for letting me do some of the things I've been able to do here. I learned about friendship from my Marshall-ese friends."

Dave Huffman and son, Andrew, depart Sat. after nine years at Kwaj.

Dave is a USAKA/KMR electrical engineer and is headed for the KMR office in Huntsville, Ala.

He says, "I'm going to hate to leave all my co-workers and the tropical environment."

Potter Yong Rhee, left, demonstrates surface decoration techniques during a free class at the Hobby Shop Monday night. About 20 residents attended the demonstration, which also featured advice from potter Dolita Dohrman (not pictured).

Pottery demonstration just scratches the surface

By Peter Rejcek

Associate Editor

Pop quiz: What do leaves, a ragged doily and acorns all have in common?

No, they're not the ingredients in a Harry Potter spell, but just a few of the odds and ends potter Yong Rhee uses to weave a little magic on the surface of his pottery.

Rhee demonstrated various techniques of pottery surface decoration during a free class at the Hobby Shop Monday night. About 20 people attended the demonstration.

Using common outdoor and household items, Rhee showed that by applying the correct amount of pressure, a plain vase could be transformed by something as simple as the imprints of a leaf. Rhee also showed the class one technique of making soap dishes, replete with a clinging gecko.

Later in the evening, potter Dolita Dohrman showed students how to meld different surface designs into one "pieced bowl."
